About ENAR

The International Biometric Society (IBS) is an international society promoting the development and application of statistical and mathematical theory and methods in the biosciences, including agriculture, biomedical science and public health, ecology, environmental sciences, forestry, and allied disciplines. The Society is organized into geographically-defined Regions. By definition of the IBS, the Eastern North American Region (ENAR) includes portions of the United States and Canada east of approximately 104 degrees West Longitude. Membership is open to all residents of this region.

The ENAR Spring Meeting, held jointly with the American Statistical Association (ASA) and the Institute of Mathematical Statistics (IMS), has a broad spectrum of educational content including invited paper sessions, short courses, tutorials, and poster sessions. Approximately 1,200 attendees participate annually.

ENAR has over 1400 members whose job titles include statisticians, mathematicians, biological scientists, and others devoted to interdisciplinary efforts in advancing the collection and interpretation of information in the biosciences.
